whom it may concern.—This will certify that I had my severe attack of the Rheumatism in my hip, I tried various means to cure it but it grew worse and worse for about three months, when I applied to Dr. JOSEPH SAUKABASIN one of the Penobscot tribe of Indians who cured me entirely and in a very short time and I have never been troubled with it since. And I feel it due to him to the community to recommend him as a wise and skilful physician. BENJAMIN SNOW

This is to certify that I was afflicted for over thirty years with a Scrofulous humor in my leg and I applied to four or five physicians and got no relief until I fell in with Doctor JOSEPH SAUKABASIN and he gave me one bottle of his medicine, and cured me so it has troubled me none since and is healed perfectly sound. My daughter Hannah was afflicted with a Cough, and Spitting of Blood and by taking his old medicine was cured SYLVANUS COOMBS.

THE HUMBLE PHARISEE

BY T S ARTHUR

What was that? exclaimed Mrs Andrews to the lady who was seated next to her as a single strain of music vibrated for a few moments on the atmosphere

A violin I suppose was answered

A violin! An expression almost of horror came into the countenance of Mrs Andrews It can't be possible

It was possible however for the sound came again prolonged and varied

What does it mean asked Mrs Andrews looking troubled and moving uneasily in her chair

Cotillons I presume was answered, carelessly

Not dancing, surely!

But even as Mrs Andrews said this a man entered, carrying in his hand a violin There was an instant movement on the part of several young members of the company Partners were chosen and ere the jealous Mrs Andrews had time to collect her suddenly bewildered thoughts the music had struck up, and the dancers were in motion

I can remain here It is an outrage! said Mrs Andrews making a motion to rise

The lady by whom she was sitting compelled her gently but firmly into her seat

What does it mean asked Mrs Andrews looking troubled and moving uneasily in her chair

Cotillons I presume was answered, carelessly

Not dancing, surely!

But even as Mrs Andrews said this a man entered, carrying in his hand a violin There was an instant movement on the part of several young members of the company Partners were chosen and ere the jealous Mrs Andrews had time to collect her suddenly bewildered thoughts the music had struck up, and the dancers were in motion

I can remain here It is an outrage! said Mrs Andrews making a motion to rise

The lady by whom she was sitting compelled her gently but firmly into her seat

Why not remain? What is an outrage? Mrs Andrews also said

Mrs Burdock knew very well that I was a member of the church The lady's manner was significant

All your friends know that Mrs Andrews, replied the lady A third person might have detected in her tones a lurking sarcasm But Mrs Andrews was not perceived by the individual addressed But what is wrong?

Wrong! Isn't that wrong? And she glanced towards the hazy wreath of human figures already circling on the floor I could not have believed it of Mrs Burdock and she knew that I was a professor of religion

She doesn't expect you to dance Mrs Andrews, said the lady

But she expects me to countenance the sin of it by my presence

Sin and folly are strong terms Mrs Andrews

I know they are and I use them advisedly I hold it a sin to dance

If you wise and good people who hold a different opinion

Wise and good! Mrs Andrews spoke with strong disgust I wouldn't give much for their wisdom and goodness—not I!

The true qualities of men and women are best seen at home When people go abroad they generally change their state—mental as well as bodily Now I have seen the home life of certain ladies who do not think it sin to dance and it was full of the heart's warm sunshine and I have seen the home life of certain ladies who held dancing to be sinful and I have said to myself, shudderingly What child can breathe that atmosphere for years and not grow up with a clouded spirit, and a fountain of bitterness in the heart!

And so you mean to say, Mrs Andrews, spoke with asperity of manner that dancing makes people better?—Is in fact a means of grace

No I say no such thing

Then what do you mean to say? I drew the only conclusion I can make

One may grow better or worse from dancing said the lady It will depend on the spirit in which the recreation is indulged In itself the act is innocent

Mrs Andrews shook her head

In what do is the sin consist

It is an idle waste of time

Can you say nothing more of it

I could, but delicacy keeps me silent

Did you ever dance

Me! What a question! No!

I have danced often And, let me say that your indulgence on the score of indelicacy is altogether an assumption

Why every body admits that

Not by any means

If the description of some of the midnight balls and assemblies I have heard, of the waltzing, and all that is true then nothing could be more indelicate,—nothing more injurious to the young and innocent

All good things become evil in their perverseness said the lady And I will readily agree with you that dancing is perverted and its use as a means of social recreation most sadly changed into what is injurious The same may be said of church going

You shock me said Mrs Andrews Excuse me, but you are profane

I trust not. For true religion—for the holy things of the church—I trust that I have the most profound reverence But let me prove what I say that even church going may become evil

I am all attention, said the incredulous Mrs Andrews

You can bear plain speaking

Me! The church member looked surprised.

Yes, you

Certainly I can But why do you ask

To put you on your guard—nothing more

Don't fear but what I can bear all the plain speaking you may venture upon As to church going being evil I am ready to prove the negative against any allegation you can advance So speak on

After a slight pause, to collect her thoughts the lady said

There has been a protracted meeting in Mr B——'s church

I know it. And a blessed time it was

You attended

Yes every day and greatly was my soul refreshed and strengthened

Did you see Mrs Eldridge there?

Mrs Eldridge? No indeed, except on Sunday She's too worldly minded for that.

She has a pew in your church

Yes, and comes every Sunday morning because it is fashionable and respectable to go to church As for her religion, it isn't worth much, and will hardly stand her at the last day

Why, Mrs Andrews! You shock me! Have you seen into her heart? Do you know her purposes? Judge not, that ye be not judged, is the divine injunction

A tree is known by its fruit, said Mrs Andrews, who felt the rebuke, and slightly colored.

Tree and, by their fruits shall ye know them, replied the lady. But come, there are too many around us for this earnest conversation We will take a quarter of an hour to ourselves in one of the less crowded rooms. No one will observe our absence, and you will be freed from the annoyance of these dances

The two ladies quietly retired from the drawing-rooms. As soon as they were alone the last speaker resumed.

PETITION.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Maine in Legislature assembled:

The undersigned, Executive Committee for the State of Maine, to promote the construction of the European and North American Railway, and Corporator named in the act of the Legislature of said State, approved August 20, 1850, incorporating said company, again approach your honorable body, in behalf of that enterprise, and request such further legislative assistance as will secure, at an early day, the completion of the undertaking.

The records of previous Legislatures of Maine show their appreciation of this scheme from the earliest inception of the undertaking; and its success, so far, must, to a very great extent, be ascribed to the action of the executive and legislative authorities of Maine in its behalf.

Referring to the action of the thirty-first Legislature for a statement of the claims of this enterprise to confidence and support, we are now able to estimate, in some measure, the influence of that action upon the public mind. The circulation in England of the report of the proceedings of the thirty-first Legislature in relation to the European and North American Railway, confirmed, in the minds of capitalists abroad, their impressions of its value, and led, as we are informed, to the adoption, by Congress, of the bill which passed the House at its recent session, and is now pending before the Senate, entitled "An Act making grants of land, to aid in the construction of Railroads and for other purposes."

By the above named Bill, it is proposed to grant to each State, an amount equal to one hundred and fifty thousand acres of the public domain, for every member of the thirty-second Congress; assigning to Maine, as her share, an aggregate of one million three hundred and fifty thousand acres for Railroads and other purposes.

In the belief that this Bill would become a law, and that the State of Maine would set aside the land thereby granted, to aid the construction of the European and North American Railway in accordance with its previous policy as expressed by the Legislature, we have made overtures to eminent English capitalists to embark in the construction of this great line. We are gratified in being able to say, that if the plans above indicated are carried out, the European and North American Railway is secured.

We feel unusual gratification in announcing this result, and to be able to say, that the most ardent hopes of its earliest friends are likely to be fully realized,—not only in the fact of its accomplishment, but in the mode of its execution. The plan proposed at the Portland Convention looked to the carrying out of the work by private companies, without any direct action or interference on the part of the government, and after the most thorough discussion, this policy has been thought the most satisfactory of any that could be proposed; and we are now able to congratulate the friends of the enterprise upon its final adoption, in New Brunswick, and the consummation of a contract, under the sanction of both the Colonial and Imperial Governments, with Messrs. Jackson, Brassey, Peto & Betts, for building the line of the European and North American Railway across the entire breadth of New Brunswick, from the frontier of Nova Scotia to that of Maine, a copy of which contract is hereto annexed, marked A. "This body of capitalists, with their associates, form the richest company of Railway contractors in the world."

It may be proper for us to say, that the carrying out of the work in New Brunswick, is of necessity dependent upon the action in Maine toward completing our portion of the work. To insure for it complete success, the whole line must be constructed,—in subordination to one general plan, though executed in separate sections,—so that an unbroken line of Railway, of uniform guage, shall extend from Halifax to a point of connection with the lines extending to Portland and to Montreal.

The parties above named have also entered into arrangements for the construction of the Grand Trunk Line of Canada, from Toronto to Montreal, with a branch to Quebec from the line of the Portland Railway at Richmond,—whereby in connection with the lines already built, or in process of construction, an unbroken line of Railway, of uniform guage, will extend from Detroit to Halifax through Maine, on the completion of the great line East.

The same parties have signified their willingness to build the entire line of the European and North American Railway, and to bring the line from the frontier of New Brunswick, to a point of connection with the roads of the United States and Canada, on terms eminently favorable to Maine. The grant of the lands sought by us, from the United States Government, will bring its accomplishment within our reach.

We cannot doubt that this statement would have excited surprise, if not have been received with a feeling of incredulity, if now made known for the first time. That a work so vast, requiring an outlay of capital so much beyond the ability of the State of Maine and the British Provinces to achieve, should be undertaken by capitalists of England, is a fact calculated to impress all minds with new notions of our commercial importance, and to give increased confidence among all classes of our people in the truth and correctness of the positions heretofore taken by the friends of the European and North American Railway.

The accomplishment of this work must materially affect the course of trade,—if not work a commercial revolution in the business relations of all North America; and the State of Maine will receive her full share, if not the largest amount of benefit to be derived from its construction.

An unbroken line of Railway from Detroit on the one side, and from Quebec on the other, of a guage of five-and-a-half feet, uniting at Richmond upon the Portland line, must pour upon that Railway an accumulation of business seeking the Atlantic Ocean, the Lower Provinces and the markets of Europe, beyond our present power of estimation.

And we believe that when all the reasons in favor of the European and North American Railway are carefully considered, all minds will concur in the opinion, that the enterprise is one of the most legitimate of commercial speculations, and that the abundant wealth of England can no where else find a safer outlet for the investment of its surplus capital.

The British islands are supplied with their leading trunk lines. The condition of affairs upon the continent of Europe is not regarded as favorable to the stability of any form of government, and the rights of private property are less secure in France and on the continent of Europe, generally, than with us. The fact is now admitted by the moneyed men of all nations, that popular governments, founded on public freedom, and public virtue, are the most stable of all,—a result eminently favorable to all the business interests of this continent.

The solution of the question of the practicability of navigating the Atlantic ocean by steam power, in 1838, has produced results upon the public mind of Europe not inferior to those which followed the discovery of America by Columbus.

The rapid development of wealth, population and political power in North America, has turned the attention of the capitalists of all Europe, within the last few years, to this continent; and it is now asserted by the highest authority, among the business men of England, that a line of Railway connecting New York, Canada and the West with the nearest port of America to Europe, shortening thereby to its lowest possible limit the transit between New York and London,—must become a most profitable investment for capital; with assurance of a perpetual increase of business upon the line. To make these fully understood, it may be proper for us briefly to refer to the political and physical geography of this part of North America.

The continents of Europe and North America are separated by the Atlantic ocean, in a distance of only one thousand six hundred and ninety-four miles, (for we regard the British isles, on the one side, and Newfoundland on the other, as properly belonging to the respective continents, along side which they are found,) and the port of trans-atlantic embarkation on either side must be that, which by its nearness to the other, having ease of access; and good anchorage, can be reached in the shortest possible time, from one shore of the ocean to the other.

Toward this result all the agencies of commerce, upon both continents, gradually but inevitably converge.

Beyond this general statement, it is not necessary for us now to go. The natural laws of trade will hereafter control the movements of business, and one commercial law govern the civilized world. When this result is reached, the eastern portion of the continent of North America will attain its natural and legitimate position in business and commercial affairs.

The obvious principles of commercial necessity have always pointed with marked significance towards the results we are now striving to reach, and the commercial spirit of all modern discovery has followed in this direction.

It may be proper in this connection to remark, that the earliest maps and charts of North America were projected upon the simplest laws of navigation in view of the then existing commerce of the world. That portion of this continent which approached nearest to Europe formed the base line of their calculations; and the distance across the Atlantic shown to be one thousand seven hundred miles and not three thousand miles, simply because the common route of travel is between points thus remote—New York and Liverpool.

In our proposal to shorten the transit between New York and London, we are merely reviving and bringing into practical use, ideas clearly entertained by the great navigators of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

The idea of an Atlantic ferry, according to Lord Bacon, between those point "where the land did nearest" has been a controlling sentiment ever since John and Sebastian Cabot discovered Newfoundland in the reign of Henry VII of England, sailing due west from Bristol, their port of embarkation, in 1497, months before Columbus came in sight of the main land of the continent. The English claimed all N. America by right of discovery and prior dominion from the taking possession of Newfoundland by the Cabots; but the superior sagacity of the French enabled them to contest the claims of England for the Empire of the new world. The fisheries of Newfoundland were entered upon by the hardy navigators of Brittany, only seven years after its discovery by the Cabots, who, calling the first land made, Cape Breton, gave the name of their own home to the territory first occupied by Europeans.—In 1598 no less than three hundred and thirty French fishing vessels were found upon the banks of Newfoundland.

In 1531, Jaques Cartier explored the St. Lawrence, and acquired a knowledge of the country as far as Montreal; and he received the title of Governor of New France, in 1540, the name by which Canada was known to Europeans.

In 1603 the King of France granted to De Monts all that part of North America between the 40th and 46th parallels of latitude, and the whole country east of the Kennebec was occupied as French territory. De Monts entertained the idea of a shorter route to Canada than thro' the St. Lawrence, from accounts obtained of the natives, and sailed south from his head quarters at Port Royal, to the Kennebec, for this purpose; but failing to reach Canada thro' this route, he explored the coast and took possession as far west as Cape Porpoise in the name of the French monarch. Boston was subsequently claimed by French diplomatists, according to Bancroft, as a part of the territory of New France.

While, therefore, the very simple and natural idea of opening a communication between the St. Lawrence and the Atlantic ocean, in the most direct line from Montreal to Europe, was suggested to the philosophical mind of De Monts in 1603, the conflict of races, of rival grants and different nationalities, delayed its execution just two centuries and an half. This great idea seems certain of being realized by the completion of the Portland and Montreal Railway in 1853, two hundred and fifty years from the time of its first suggestion.

We cannot doubt that had the country between Montreal and Casco Bay been under one government, the best means of communication known to that age would have been opened at an early period after its discovery, and the whole history of the continent thereby materially changed.

At the close of the sixteenth century, France and Spain had almost exclusive possession of the new world, and the history of America must be studied in connection with the religious and political history of Europe to fully understand the great events that affected our country.

King James of England granted all North America between the 34th and 42th parallels of latitude to the colonies of Virginia and Plymouth in 1606, and in the year 1607 the earliest settlement of the English in the new world was made at the mouth of the Kennebec. This settlement was abandoned, however, in 1608, the same year in which Champlain laid the foundations of the city of Quebec, explored the country to the south of the St Lawrence, and gave his own name to the lake that divides New York from New England.

In the same year in which Champlain laid the foundations of Quebec, the feeble colony at Jamestown was planted by English emigrants.

The settlement of the Pilgrims at Plymouth in 1620, driven thence by persecution, was, however, the great event in the history of America. Upon a barren shore of New England, a company of English Puritans planted free institutions in America which are destined to overspread the earth.

The English possession at this time and for more than a century afterwards, were confined to the narrow belt of country along the Atlantic coast, from Sagadahock to Florida, upon the eastern slope of the Appalachian chain while the French held the great basins of the St. Lawrence and the Mississippi, from the mouth of each river to its source in the great west, containing as they did, the great granary of the earth.

The English having become permanently established in New England, the French were prevented from extending their settlement along the coast west of the Kennebec River, which became the admitted boundary between Acadia and New England, "not as the line of peace and concord but as the place of future controversies."

Settlements were made by the French in several places in Maine east of Sagadahock; and Frenchman's Bay has always retained the name given to it by the English, as the home of the French emigrant, and the title of Madame De Gregoire to a large tract in the vicinity of Mount Desert, was confirmed by the Legislature of Massachusetts as late as 1786.

The Plymouth company attempted to occupy the territory east of Sagadahock; built a trading house and a fort at Pemaquid in 1625, and at Bagaduce in 1626. These efforts gave rise to fierce and bitter contests, but the English settlers were driven from Acadia. The rivalships of French leaders and the contests of hostile races, in which Indian cruelties bore a conspicuous part, threw a distrust as to their safety, in seeking a home within the territory now held by us, over the minds of European emigrants who sought the New World; to which were added, those extravagant accounts of the rigor of the climate, framed by the early settlers at the mouth of the Kennebec as an apology for their desertion, and gave to all this portion of the continent east of Casco Bay a reputation, adverse to its growth, from which it slowly recovered.

The early settlers of Maine were a race of men full of enterprise and daring. The influences of its early history, the extraordinary physical conformation of its extended coast, deeply indented with bays and arms of the sea, with shores as bold and rugged as those of any northern sea of Europe, imparted to its earlier population a hardihood and a daring such as no other people of the country possessed; and the intelligent traveler, who now sails along the coast from Cape Porpoise to the head of the Bay of Fundy, reads in the history of the early voyagers, and of the wars which followed the claims of rival grants, of an heroic age.

The philosophical instinct of the Frenchman De Monts, saw in this goodly coast the natural outlet of the products of his beautiful New France, and his followers did not yield, till after years of conflict, so rich a possession. But after alternate conquests by the English and French, the boundaries of New England on the one side, and Acadia on the other, were settled by the peace of Ryswick, in 1697, at the St. Croix.

The title to the soil of the Province of Maine had been ceded to Massachusetts by the heirs of Ferdinando Gorges in 1677, and after the peace of Ryswick the country along the Atlantic coast to the St. Croix, after bitter domestic struggles, passed under the dominion of the Puritans, and Sir William Phipps, a native of Maine, obtained from William and Mary, in 1691, the new charter of "The Province of Massachusetts Bay," by which the "Colony of Plymouth," of "Massachusetts Bay," and the "Province of Maine," were all united, and Sir William Phipps became its first Governor.

The history of the land titles of Maine would require a volume. Scarcely a foot of soil can be found that was not claimed under rival grants from the same English sources, and the whole has at times been claimed by the French; and it was not until within the brief period of the memory of the men of this age, that the title to large portions of Maine have been determined.

The earlier settlers of Maine were members of the Church of England, and the first religious service in Maine was in their form of worship. The history of its religious disputes is as fruitful in suggestion as the political events which marked its subjugation to Massachusetts; but the people of Maine gradually assimilated their notions to the ideas of the Puritans, and they took a leading part in the expedition by which Louisburgh was first captured in 1743.

The French war, in which the thirteen colonies embarked in 1755, terminated by the taking of Quebec, by Wolfe, 1759; an event which has already exerted and is still destined to exert more influence upon the world than any military engagement of ancient or modern times. The fall of Quebec gave the English race supremacy in the new world, and by the peace of 1763, the French ceded what is now British North America to England.

The magnificent project of a great French empire in America was weakened, if not destroyed, by the surrender of the St. Lawrence and the Eastern ports of Nova Scotia; and the sale of Louisiana, by Napoleon, extinguished the remaining title of France to the territory equal in size to the continent of Europe, and destined hereafter to sustain a population greater than that of the Chinese empire of the India.

The revolutionary troubles gave importance to the Lower Provinces, and the Royalists who peopled Canada, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, gave a tone of political bitterness to the temper of the population adverse to our form of government, which sixty years did not allay, till the treaty of Washington negotiated by Mr. Webster in 1842, established our North Eastern Boundary, removed the last cause of serious controversy, and laid the foundations of that community of interest, which is gradually drawing the English race upon both continents into commercial and social alliance. The influences resulting from that greatest diplomatic effort of any age, are now seen and felt in the measures in progress toward carrying out by joint exertion, the means of communication between the Provinces and the United States and establishing reciprocal trade upon the continent of North America.

The building of the European and North American Railway in connection with the lines extending to Detroit and Quebec, must work a greater change in the commercial relations of this continent than any event that has yet transpired in its history.

By the accomplishment of this work we shall realize the ideas which animated those whom we may fairly consider as the founders of our State.

While England shall retain her colonies in America, this portion of her dominions, known as British North America, will be an object of more solicitude than any portion of the Empire, and is likely to attract to it more English capital than any other, from the rapid development of its great resources, the increasing energies of its people, and the attractions of its free institutions.

Within the last twenty-five years the application of steam power to the purposes of locomotion, has changed the laws of population and of political economy. The increased capacity for production which the Railway confers, has had the effect in New England to concentrate the population of the country into the manufacturing districts, while the agricultural portions of it, and in fact all of the older States have fallen behind the average progress of our population. The Railway has been the great agency in working these changes.

The relative growth of Maine and Massachusetts for the last sixty years in comparison with that of the whole country, as exhibited in the following tabular statement, shows the value of the Railway, in the increase of population, bringing in equal or greater measure an increase of wealth, with the introduction of more of the luxuries of civilized life.

Up to the year 1835, there was a large immigration into Maine from other portions of New England. From 1835 to 1840 the tide of immigration was turned, and a very large and most valuable portion of our population emigrated between 1840 and 1845. This was clearly the result of Railway improvements in Massachusetts and elsewhere, and the absence of similar exertions in Maine.

The returns of the census of 1850 show that Maine has not even retained for the last ten years the natural increase of its resident population, while the population of Massachusetts has increased far beyond it.

These returns show, that there are, within the United States, an aggregate of 584,310 persons, natives of Maine, of whom 517,127 only are residents of the State—while the entire population of Maine was only 583,169 persons, or 1,041 less than its native population. Of this aggregate of population, 31,456 persons are of foreign birth; add these to 584,310 persons residing in the Union born in Maine, and it would give us a population of 615,766, an aggregate less than the estimates made in official tables prior to the taking of the census in 1850, made upon the basis of former calculations, of the growth of population.

The State of Massachusetts had in 1850 a population of 994,499. The population of the United States born within the limits of Massachusetts, was but 894,066 or 100,498 less than its entire population. That increase has been received by Massachusetts over her natural increase by foreign immigration.

The following table shows the losses and gains to our population in the different States of the Union.

By the preceeding table it will be seen that the balance of emigration is largely against us, and that with the exception of New Hampshire, Vermont and Delaware, every State has gained at our expense. Twenty-five years ago the results of such a census would have shown us a far more flattering picture. We dwell upon these topics not for the purpose of depreciating the advantages of our position, but as a means of showing that higher efforts than have heretofore characterized our policy must be resorted to if we would retain our relative position in the national confederacy. And we believe that the great work toward accomplishing for Maine, results such as are shown to have occurred in Massachusetts and other States, is the building of the European and North American Railway.

We desire to receive European intelligence and our supplies of European Goods through the easiest and most direct route, rather than purchase them at second hand, subject to increased cost of transportation and commissions. We desire also to forward to the lower Provinces and to Europe, our surplus products at the cheapest rates, receiving our traffic returns at the lowest possible cost. In short, without enlarging upon topics which have been fully presented in previous communications on the subject, we desire to attract across the breadth of our State, and send in return, by the same channel, that great stream of travel and traffic already vastly enlarged and rapidly increasing between the millions of Europe and the rapidly increasing millions of America. This natural channel of business formed by the geographical features of the continent so long obstructed by the accidents of fortune and the political agencies of European powers, we desire to see thrown open to the free use of the commerce of the world. The commercial importance of Maine depends more upon the growth of Canada, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, than upon that of the States of this Union. From its geographical position, Maine must forever separate the Upper and Lower British Provinces, or be the means of uniting them. The possession of the seacoast of Maine has for two centuries and a half controlled the destinies of the new world.

The French first, and the English afterwards, saw the necessity of a connection between New France and Acadia, across the territory of Maine, avoiding the difficult and dangerous navigation of the St. Lawrence to enable either country to realize its proper destiny. Here we find the true solution of the great events of the early history of New France and Acadia, and the real cause of all the disputes as to our North Eastern Boundary, so discreditable to the diplomacy of England.

It is now admitted by every writer of English history, that the language of the treaty of 1783, describing the boundary line, can admit of no other interpretation than that favorable to the claim of Maine, but without a portion of Maine, British North America was completely severed, as far as its commercial intercourse was concerned, which precluded the possibility of a community of interest or of a profitable union.

The laws of commerce in the meantime revolutionized the political opinions of the world, and the adoption of the principles of reciprocal trade must forever put an end to the distinctions of race and nationality among all who speak a common language in America.

We are already attracting the people of the Provinces to the States. Our census returns of 1850 show 147,700 persons in the United States, natives of British America, and of this number 14,181, or one tenth of the whole, are residents of Maine. As between the United States and British America the balance is largely in our favor.

The census of Canada, for 1851, shows 56,-214 persons in Canada, natives of the United States. In New Brunswick, in 1851, there were but 1,344 persons of foreign birth, or born without the limits of the British Empire. The census returns of Nova Scotia, for 1851, do not show the origin of the population, but it is stated by Dr. Gesner in his valuable work on the Industrial Resources of Nova Scotia, that there is a strong tide of emigration towards the United States from all parts of that Province—that 1,040 young men left for the United States in 1847, and that 8,000 persons at least, emigrated from that Province in 1848.

If the opinions expressed in this Memorial can be carried out, the Lower Provinces of Maine will not only retain their natural increase of population, but will attract the best portion of European emigration and retain it within their own borders.

Without enlarging upon topics familiar to every public man in Maine, the undersigned, believing that the building of the European and North American Railway will exert the most favorable influence upon all the great interests of Maine, bringing all parts of it into easy communication with each other, with the continent of Europe and with Canada and the other States of the Union, realizing in our day the glowing anticipations of those who first visited its shores—bringing in its train an increase of comforts and advantages to all who dwell within the borders of our noble State—most earnestly, but respectfully ask of the Legislature of Maine such aid, encouragement and assistance thereto, as will secure at the earliest day the accomplishment of this undertaking.

We ask the Legislature to set aside for the building of this road the lands or other assistance granted by Congress for the aid of Railways in Maine.

We also ask an amendment of the charter allowing the stock and bonds of the company to be issued in sterling currency with a view to their disposal in the English market.

And we further ask permission to extend the said line to a point of junction and connection with the Railways of the United States and Canada on such terms of connection with other roads as will secure an unbroken line of Railway on the broad gauge from Halifax to Portland and to Montreal and by similar connections to New York and Detroit.

LEGISLATURE OF MAINE.

AUGUSTA, Feb. 3.

IN THE SENATE.

Petitions presented and referred.—Hiram Belcher et als, for increase of the salary of the County Attorney of Franklin County, (referred on motion of Mr Clark of Franklin to the joint delegation from that county;) proprietors of West Minot meeting-house for sale of the said house; trustees of Bridgton Academy for aid.

On motion of Mr Stark, the same committee that acted yesterday was appointed to receive, sort and count the votes for United States Senator—and, having attended to their duty report-ed—

Whole number	31
Wm Pitt Fessenden had	18
Nathan Clifford	13

A message was received from the House that they had not made a choice of a United States Senator.

On the disagreeing vote of the two Houses on the order discharging the joint select Committee on so much of the Governor's Message as related to the public lands of Maine and Massachusetts the Senate appointed Senators Cary, Coburn and Eaton, and on motion of Mr. Cary the Senate insisted on its vote referring so much of the Governor's message as is included in the above named order to the standing Committee on State lands and State roads and appointed the same conferees.

IN THE HOUSE.

Mr Morse of Bath, called up the bill to incorporate the City Bank, at Bath, the question being on its passage to be engrossed.

After discussion the bill was passed to be engrossed.

On motion of Mr Sewall of Oldtown, the House adhered to its former vote referring to a special committee the Governor's message relative to the Maine and Massachusetts public lands.

On motion of Mr. Hill of Bangor the petition for a new town from part of Bangor, and accompanying papers, were ordered to be taken from the files and referred.

BALLOT FOR SENATOR.

On motion of Mr Sewall of Oldtown, the committee appointed yesterday, were directed to receive the votes to day.

Read and assigned.—Bills from the Senate to incorporate Mount Waldo Bank at Frankfort.

CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.

IN THE SENATE.

The Warehousing bill was taken up.

Mr. Miller of New Jersey spoke in opposition to it. When he had concluded, Mr. Hunter moved its postponement till to-morrow. Agreed to.

The bill to organize the Navy was then taken up.

Mr. Stockton moved 66 amendments, which he said had received the sanction of the two Committees of Congress on Naval Affairs and of the Navy Department. The bill was discussed by Messrs. Stockton, Hale, Hunter, and Mallory, when all the amendments were adopted, and the bill ordered to be engrossed.

The bill authorizing registers to American built vessels, owned wholly or in part by persons who have not completed their naturalization, was passed.

The Pacific railroad bill was taken up, the question being Mr. Broadhead's substitute.

Mr. Weller replied to Mr. Bayard, who spoke yesterday, denying that there was anything in the bill creating a monster corporation, surpassing in its overshadowing influence the United States Bank.

Mr. Bayard replied by reading the 13th section.

Mr. Weller rejoined. He said when he spoke of the bill he did not know of the contents of the 13th section. He now believed that the bill did create a monster corporation, and that under the power given to it by this bill it would have the right to issue millions of paper money. Unless the bill was modified in this particular he could not vote for it.

Mr. Davis got the floor when the Senate adjourned.

☞ You may live in Rome, in a comfortable manner—so to speak, upon ten cents a day! People of excessive regard for spending money, have found it very hard to shuffle off six hundred dollars a year—any way they could fix it! You may live in comfort, any where else in the Christian world, cheaper than in the United States!

The Reciprocity and Fishing Treaty agreed upon by Mr. Everett, Secretary of State and Mr. Crampton the British Minister has been received at the Department of State with the British ratification.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 2.

The State Legislature has passed finally the bill making an appropriation to aid in the erection of a monument in Independence Square, Philadelphia, commemorative of the original thirteen States and the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

☞ Whoever wishes to get along through this world has only to take lessons of a man chasing a grasshopper through a field. With a long neck and peeled eyes take a few hurried steps, stop short, peep over, peep under, now to the left, then to the right, one flutter—and ye have him.

Peace is the evening star of the soul, as virtue is its sun, and the two are never far apart.

IT IS A FACT ESTABLISHED and well known by the Arabians attained a height in the knowledge of medicine which caused the whole world to wonder ... With them the science of chemistry had its birth, and it is, therefore, not at all strange that a people so eminently successful in the healing art, and so persevering and daring in character, should, by actual and untiring experiment, discover remedies far surpassing in efficacy all others, for the cure of those diseases incident to them from their mode of life. The greater part of their time being spent in hazardous and bloody warfare with the different tribes, they were subject to the most violent attacks of rheumatism, paralysis, neuralgic pains, and chronic inflammatory diseases, as also the most horrid wounds, sprains, bruises, tumors, swellings, diseases of the joints, &c. &c. All these diseases they were so surprisingly efficient in curing, that the uninitiated looked with wonder, and attributed their skill to the powers of magic. H. G. FARRELL'S ARABIAN LINIMENT is a composition of balsams and oils, from rare plants peculiar to this country, and it was by the use of the articles composing this great remedy, that not only their physicians, but even the wild Arabs of the desert were enabled to perform such miraculous cures. The Arab steed is world renowned for his beautiful symmetry of form, his unsurpassed speed and spirit, and the incredible fatigue he is capable of enduring. Why is it? Because from the time of his birth his limbs are carefully watched, and upon the first appearance of disease the magic lotion is applied, and such things as contracted sweeney, poll evil, fistula, ringbone, scratches, spavin, lameness, etc., etc., are unknown. The same results will follow in all cases where H. G. Farrell's Genuine Arabian Liniment is used in time. Therefore delay not in procuring a good supply of it, for every dollar spent in it will save you twenty, and a great deal of suffering in the course of life.

LOOK OUT FOR COUNTERFEITS.

The public are cautioned against another counterfeit, which has lately made its appearance called W. B. Farrell's Arabian Liniment, the most dangerous of all the counterfeits, because his having the name of Farrell many will buy it in good faith, without the knowledge that a counterfeit exists, and they will perhaps only discover their error when the spurious mixture has wrought its evil effects.

The genuine article is manufactured only by H. G. Farrell, sole inventor and proprietor, and wholesale druggist, No. 17 Main Street, Peoria, Illinois, to whom all applications for Agencies must be addressed. Be sure you get it with the letters H. G. before Farrell's, thus—H. G. FARRELL'S—and his signature on the wrappers, all others are counterfeits.

Sold by INGRAHAM & FULLER, wholesale and retail, Bangor. Also by B. F. Kinsell, Oldtown; ... & Hamilton, Dexter. Geo Parcher, Ellsworth. ... Flaherty, Houlton. And by regularly authorized agents throughout the United States.

☞ Price 25 and 50 cents, and $1 per bottle.

AGENTS WANTED in every town, village and hamlet in the United States, in which one is not already established. Address H. G. Farrell as above, accompanied with good reference as to character, responsibility, &c.

Newell's Patent Safety Lamp

AND LAMP FEEDER.—A new article, warranted to prevent all accidents from the use of Burning Fluid, Camphene, and all other Explosive Compounds, used for the production of light.

This invention is applied to Silver, Brass, Britannia, Glass, and all other styles of LAMPS AND LAMP FEEDERS.

The following certificate is a sufficient guarantee of the entire safety and efficiency of the Safety Lamp and Feeder:

CERTIFICATE.

We have had an opportunity to test the Patent Safety Lamp and Feeder of Mr John Newell, of this city, in regard to the measure of protection which their construction affords. In the trials to which we subjected them, we endeavored, without effect, to produce explosions of the vapor of the fluid mixed with air and to burst them by the pressure of the vapor alone. The principle adopted by Mr. Newell is that of the well known Davy Lamp. He has so combined the parts that we are satisfied that all risk of explosive action is removed.

Yacht EXCURSION to Australia!

The "A 1" Clipper Yacht "PEYTONA," 609 tons will succeed the Albus, as second Ship of this line, and sail from New York on the 1st of February.

THIS beautiful specimen of Marine architecture was built by the world renowned M'Kay, of Boston; for a racer, and like her namesake, the famous racehorse, she has never been beaten. Mr M'Kay was the builder of the Flying Fish, Flying Cloud, Staffordshire, Sovereign of the Seas, and other Clippers in Mr. John Ogden's Line to California, and the Peytona stands preeminent among the proudest monuments of his skill. She will be fitted up in a style as elegant as unique, and fresh provisions will be furnished for at least one half of the voyage. It is confidently expected that she will land her passengers at Melbourne on the Sixtieth day from New York, including stoppages.

No such opportunity as this has yet been offered to gentlemen desirous of visiting that enchanting region; and, as none but passengers freight will be taken, those disposed making a little venture to cover expenses, may do so.

It is not fair to compare this ship with the ordinary class of vessels hitherto fitted out and now advertised for Australia, as the Peytona is above competition from any quarter.

She will take an experienced Surgeon, and all the attention of a first class hotel will be provided in the most liberal manner.

A drawing of the ship, and plan of births, will be exhibited, and rates of passage and other particulars made known, by applying to the Australian Packet Line.

THE ROAD TO HEALTH!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

CURE OF A DISORDERED LIVER AND BAD DIGESTION.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. R. W. Kirkus, Chemist, 7, Prescot Street, Liverpool, dated 6th June, 1851.

To Professor Holloway,

SIR,—Your Pills and Ointment have stood the highest on our sale list of Proprietary Medicines for some years. A customer, to whom I can refer for any enquiries, desires me to let you know the particulars of her case. She had been troubled for years with a disordered liver, and bad digestion. On the last occasion, however, the virulence of the attack was so alarming, and the inflammation set in so severely, that doubts were entertained of her not being able to bear up under it; fortunately she was induced to try your Pills, and she informs me that after the first, and each succeeding dose, she had great relief. She continued to take them, and although she used only three Boxes, she is now in the enjoyment of perfect health. I could [illegible] you many more cases, but the above [illegible]

HERE IS YOUR REMEDY!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

A MOST MIRACULOUS CURE OF BAD LEGS, AFTER 43 YEARS' SUFFERING.

Extract of a Letter from Mr. William Galpin, of 70, St Mary's Street, Weymouth, dated May 15th, 1851.

To Professor Holloway,

SIR,—At the age of 18 my wife (who is now 61) caught a violent cold, which settled in her legs, and ever since that time they have been more or less sore, and greatly inflamed. Her agonies were distracting, and for months together she was deprived entirely of rest and sleep. Every remedy that medical men advised was tried, but without effect; her health suffered severely, and the state of her legs was terrible. I had often read your advertisements, and advised her to try your Pills and Ointment; and, as a last resource, after every other remedy had proved useless, she consented to do so. She commenced six weeks ago, and strange to relate, is now in good health. Her legs are painless, without seam or scar, and her sleep sound and undisturbed. Could you have witnessed the sufferings of my wife during the last 43 years, and contrast them with her present enjoyment of health, you would indeed feel delighted in having been the means of so greatly alleviating the sufferings of a fellow creature.
